

Owned and operated by Brad and Sherri Fuller

In 1968, a young Brad Fuller decided to leave his small Connecticut town to explore what was quickly emerging as one of the most desirable places to live in the United States - Southern California. As a young manufacturing designer, Brad thrived in the youthful and idealistic environment which characterized sunny Los Angeles County.

Although he was an integral cog in a new electronics company with recognizable potential, Brad decided to follow his heart. Since he had been in Southern California, he had not been able to find a good sandwich, nothing that even came close to what he had proudly lived on for many of his 24 years past. So he moved back to Connecticut to learn a trade - the trade of making the perfect grinder.

Brad returned to Southern California six months later, but instead of a drafting table, some paper and pencils, this time he was equipped with a business partner, a business plan, and a new craft. Not long thereafter, the first Original Giant Grinder was born.

Today, the Giant Grinder maintains the same high standards that have always been the foundation of the dream. The freshest local ingredients are used; local whenever possible. And the business is still truly "family owned and operated." Brad's son, Eric, runs their popular Long Beach store of 25 years, while Brad and his wife, Sherri, proudly operate their newest location in San Luis Obispo. You might even see their daughter, Jamie, behind the counter now and then. The Giant Grinder (or the "G-shop" as the family has come to call it) has found a home here on the Central Coast, and welcomes the community in for a bite!
